The National Multicultural Western Heritage Museum (NMWHM) (formerly the National Cowboys of Color Museum and Hall of Fame), a non-profit 501(c)(3) museum located in Fort Worth, Texas, documents the many positive accomplishments that multicultural cowboys and early frontier pioneers contributed to the settling of the western United States, through exhibits, workshops and lectures for youth and adults as well. The focus of the museum is designed to help teach young people about the contributions made to the settling of the old west, giving them a more complete recognition of the many faces of people and events of the American Western Frontier.
